Why are you at the University of Washington?

I am here to further my education, make new friends, and learn how to live on my own.

What does it mean to you to be a fully engaged member of the University community?

It means being proud of being a husky. Whether that pride is shown at games or through studying hard, being a husky means caring about your time at the UW.

What do you hope to gain or learn from being here?

I hope to gain long-lasting friendships and learn new concepts and perspectives.

What do you need or want your support system to look like at the UW?

I want to go to office hours more to form connections with my TAs and professors for an academic support system.

The T-shirts I'll wear at UW

Being successful at the UW means point blank graduating with a bachelor or the arts degree in Psychology. It also means being content in my academics and friendships. And lastly being confident in myself and my life.

What is one academic goal for your first year? What is the action you will have to achieve that goal?

I want to finish all my major requirements so I can apply either autumn or winter quarter of my sophomore year. I have already planned out all my classes/credits and will likely only have 1 or 2 classes left for next year.

What specific opportunities or involvements will you explore at the UW?

I am currently looking for internships through the UW. I am in the film club. I may also look into seeing if there's a yoga class at the UDA.

What is one personal goal for your first year? What is the action you will take to achieve it?

I want to strengthen friendships -- new and old. I will carry out this goal by reaching out to at least two friends a week to get dinner or to do something together.

They each will in their own way support either my academic or personal goals as a fully engaged member of the University of Washington.
